REV. JASPER HOWELL WRITES OF ENGLAND

Europe Crowded With Sightseers from America This Summer, He Says.

A WEEK IN LONDON

Hears Discussion of Suffrage and King's Accession Oath in Parliament.

On Tuesday evening, July 26th, after traveling through the picturesque scenery of South Wales, I reached Paddington station, London.

The next day, I found great difficulty in securing passage for home-ward voyage. Some steamers were all filled for three months in advance. It seems that half of America is over here.

For a few weeks, cool weather and rainy days prevailed here. A heat wave seldom visits London. It was strikingly noticeable to one arriving from Missouri. The summer season begins later here than in the central West. It properly begins on August 1, on the Annual Bank holiday. Then there is an exodus from the city to the sea shore and to various inland resorts of England. Parliament adjourned only two days ago. Congregations are diminished, but are larger during August than in our American cities.

On Saturday I went to be a guest in a home in the North of London over Sunday near the Church where I was preaching. The courtesy and hospitality in an English home reveal the kindest feelings of the English people for their American cousins as they uniformly refer to us. The newspapers give American news following that of England. Then follows foreign news. They do not think of us as foreigners.

My host took me in his car through interesting parts of his borough and then on to the country. There are perhaps a score of boroughs in the metropolis, each having its own mayor and governing council. This of course prevents uniformity.

I spent two days in Essex, 25 miles from London in the home of an uncle of Prof. Gauntlett of Stephens College. His father and uncle were also rectors in this church. The charm of scenery is not equal to the charm of home life in the best homes of England. King George V. recently speaking from the Throne itself, said: "The foundations of national glory are set in the homes of the people, and they will only remain unshaken while the family life of our race and nation is strong, simple and pure."

A visitor never tires watching the surging life in these crowded thoroughfares. Motor cars, motor omnibuses, horse omnibuses and carriages make a thrilling picture. The London police are the best I have ever seen. All traffic halts at the sight of his uplifted hand. I have counted more than a dozen vehicles standing in one street waiting for permission to pass. The pedestrian crosses in safety. In the case of two streets crossing each other at right angles, the traffic of one street has the right of way. The policeman at this strategic point is rightfully an absolute czar.

Everywhere one encounters sight-seers. They are crowding the hotels and beautiful stores. Nor are they absent from the British Museum, Westminster Abbey, the Parliament Buildings, the famous Art galleries, and the Japanese Exposition.

This week the King made his first visit to the City since he ascended the Throne. The City is only the central part of the metropolis. The occasion of the King's visit was to inspect one of the hospitals. For miles the streets were lined with people, waiting the arrival of the Royal Carriage.

My friend, Dr. Shakespeare, wrote to a member of the House of Commons and secured admission for me to the visitors' gallery where I spent two afternoons. The discussion upon Women's Suffrage and the King's Accession Oath was intensely thrilling. The former oath was needlessly offensive to Roman Catholics, requiring the King to repudiate specified doctrines of the Catholic Church. The Prime Minister presented a bill, omitting the objectionable reference to the Catholics but the oath proposed included the declaration of membership in the "Church established by law in England." This of course was opposed by the Non-Conformists in the House. The Presbyterians of Scotland did not like the exclusion of their church by the words, "Church established by law in England." The Prime Minister at the second reading accepted the amendment proposed by the Non-Conformists, omitting the words, requiring the King to declare himself a member of the Church of England. The bill that passed provided that in the future the new King will declare that "I am a faithful Protestant and will, according to the true intent of the enactments which secure the Protestant succession to the Throne of my Realm, uphold and maintain them to the best of my powers according to law."

Parliament is determined to uphold the Protestant Succession and to preserve the liberties won at great cost in the past struggles of England's history. The heart of the nation is as intensely Protestant as ever. Thus again has England repudiated absolutely the claims of the Papacy to temporal authority. The present conflict of the Vatican with Spain has by this act of Parliament been eliminated from the future in England.

I will spend next week at Brighton-by-the-Sea.

W. JASPER HOWELL.

FOOTBALL OUTLOOK BETTER THAN 1909

will go to a player on last year's freshman team. O. E. Houston, of Clinton, Okla.; S. D. Perkins, of Kansas City, W. T. Magee, of Bethany, are among those who have a chance for the place.

For the ends there is material to let. Besides the three last year's Tigers, Idler, Shuck and Pixlee, there are six other candidates, several of them first-class prospects. LeMire showed great form on last year's "scrubs," and is expected to make an end. Other men who did good work on the freshman team and who will be candidates for an end position are: R. W. Hocker, of Kansas City; F. N. Calvin, of St. Louis, and D. D. Allison, of Kansas City.

Back Field Will Be Fast.

For back-field positions there will be about twenty-five candidates. Hackney, known in the Missouri Valley as "the man with the educated toe," will be back again this year. And Hall, who also did some good kicking last year, will try for one of the halves. From the available material it is expected to develop a faster back field than last year. Several fast track men will try for positions.

Herzog, captain of the track team, who did the high and low hurdles and the high jump, will be tried out at halfback. Guy Kirksey, who was on the freshman relay team and who did some fast work on the track, will try for a back-field place. And Knoble, who also was on the freshman relay team, will be out with the first squad on the gridiron.

And for kicking Missouri will not be entirely dependent upon Hackney and Hall although they did splendid work last year. E. H. C. Bernard, of St. Louis, a member of last year's freshman team, is a good drop-kicker if up to last year's form. He probably will be tried at half or quarter. J. C. Mills, of Kirksville, did some good drop-kicking on last year's freshman team, and probably will be tried at quarter this fall. J. M. Nowell, of Columbia, is another quarterback prospect who is a good kicker and punter.

Other men who probably will try for places in the back field are: E. H. Roberts, J. G. Standley, of Carrollton; Otto Stipp, of Moberly; Proctor Thompson, of Columbia; H. B. Carpenter of Helena; F. C. Duvall, of Pierce City; F. P. Tillman of Loose Creek; W. C. Woodson, of St. Louis; G. R. Berry, of Pawnee, Okla.; G. R. Edwards, of Kansas City; D. E. Dexter, of Joplin, and C. E. Driver, of Carthage, a brother of W. Lloyd Driver, a well-known former Missouri football man and all-round athlete.
